DEAD NEGRO FOUND UNDER THE GRAMMAR SCHOOL BUILDING AT NOON

Albert Martin, Coast Line Fireman, Murdered at Early Hour This Morning and Body Concealed Under Building.

School Children Make Gruesome Discovery at Noon Hour. Stampede Follows. Thought to Have Been Killed by Crap Game Companion. Probably Lingered for Several Hours.

A gruesome find was made today at noon by pupils of the grammar school when the dead body of Albert Martin, a negro fireman, was found crammed in one of the ventilation openings of the cellar. Martin's skull was crushed by a blow from some heavy instrument, in the hands of unknown parties, robbery supposed to have been the motive. The body had been under the building all day and at the noon hour the bloody sill of the ventilation opening attracted the children's attention and quite a commotion followed, the finding of the body crammed under the building resulting.

Robbery the Motive

There now remains practically no doubt but that robbery was the motive of the murderer, as Martin was paid his month's salary of $50 last night on returning from his run of the Ribb local freight, and another reports show that he had won $30 last night from another negro. A negro man who is also employed by the Coast Line came to the scene this afternoon and stated that at 3 o'clock this morning Martin, in company with another negro named John Teague, came to Johnnie Williams' store in Dixie, and that the former stated that he had won $30 from Teague. The two left together, stating that they were going home. Officers were then put on the track of Teague and learned that he had not reported for duty today and that he had not been seen at his boarding house since late last night, thus fastening suspicion on Teague.

Opinions Differ about Death

Opinions about the manner and place where Martin met his death are varying in many respects, and the case is a baffling one. An iron bar was found near the building and many judging from the fact that a spot of blood was found on it, declare it to be the instrument with which the death blow was dealt, but members of the coroner's jury think that there is not enough blood on the instrument to warrant this theory.

Beside the place where the body was shoved into the ventilation hole there was another pool of blood, found but this was at another part of the grounds, or about twenty steps around the corner. It appears from the blood signs on the sill of another ventilator than an effort was made to get the body in there also but finding the place nailed up, the body was evidently picked up and carried to the ventilator where it was later found, where the murderers [illegible] the [illegible] and knocked the [illegible] off, [illegible]. The blood had soaked in for several inches at what appeared to be the first ventilator tried, thus indicating that the unfortunate man had lain there for some time.

Evidently Had Not Been Dead Long

Jim Sorrie, the negro janitor at the grammar school building, stated to the officials that he had heard a noise this morning about 9 o'clock, but that after a short investigation, decided that it was only the coal falling in the cellar.

Many opinions of the time of his death were expressed by those who witnessed the examination of his body, but it was generally conceded that he did not die until some time today, owing to the fact that the wound was still bleeding after the body was removed from the hiding place.

Coroner's Jury Investigating

Justice of the Peace J A Rollins was called to hold a coroner's inquest and the following gentlemen were sworn in for duty: W. D. Fuller, A. B. Vickery, C. S. Lee, J. V. Brown, John Thompson, W. E. Culver and Dr. H. Green. They are conducting an investigation this afternoon and it will likely be a late hour in the afternoon before they report, as officers are making an effort to get more testimony and make the investigation complete.

Children Receive Fright

When the discovery of Martin's body, which took place by the girls on the girls campus, a big commotion went up among the young students and they received quite a fright when it was discovered that their fears of blood had caused the revelation of a dead body. The male

BOYS ARE CARELESS AND THREE ARE DEAD

Rochester, N. Y., Nov. 13.—A boyish prank of throwing nitroglycerine blasting cartridges into a bon-fire they had built late that afternoon, resulted in an explosion that instantly killed one boy, and two companions died later at the general hospital.

The dead are: John McGuire, aged 11; Archie Clark, aged 13, and William Perry, aged 8.

The force of the explosion shattered windows within a radius of 500 feet. It is believed that the boys threw about 450 of the blasting cartridges into the fire. The boys took them from the plant of the Rochester Lime Company.

The body of Perry was hurled high in the air over a tall tree and landed in the branches of an apple tree. The head was found on the roof of a back kitchen of a dwelling about 100 feet in an opposite direction, while one leg was carried over several trees and one dwelling before it landed on the sidewalk of a street nearly 200 feet away.

The eyes of both Clark and McGuire were blown out and their bodies were terribly mutilated. Neither recovered consciousness.

O'NEAL TO DELIVER AN ADDRESS IN NEW YORK

WILL SPEAK BEFORE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE THURSDAY NIGHT

Governor Emmet O'Neal left Montgomery at 6 o'clock this morning for New York, where he will deliver an address Thursday night at the annual banquet of the chamber of commerce. His subject will be "Representative Government and the Common Law."

The invitation to make this speech came to the governor following the conference of governors in New Jersey early in the fall. Governor O'Neal there came before the people as a ready and fluent speaker, and [illegible] with Governor [illegible] on the question of [illegible]

Compliment to Alabama

[illegible] the governor regard the honor extended him as a high compliment. They feel that the invitation is complimentary to the state and to the South as well. It is the first time a governor outside of New York has been a speaker and guest at honor at one of the annual banquets.

There are to be three speakers other than Governor O'Neal. These are James Bryce, British ambassador to America, who will deliver an address on "The Changes of Forty Years in America;" Dr. S. S. Wise, of New York, who will speak on "The Conscience of the Nation," and President Butler, of Columbia University, New York, whose address will be on "Politics and Business."

Other Notable Guests

Other guests of honor at the banquet will be Secretary of Interior Fisher, Governor Dix, of New York; Senator Elihu Root, of New York; General Horace Porter, of the United States Army; Alfred E. Moseley, of London; J. Pierpont Morgan and Andrew Carnegie.

Following the speech Tuesday evening, Governor O'Neal will remain in New York until November 24, when he will speak at the annual meeting of the Railway Business Association of New York City. The governor says he does not know yet what will be the nature of his address.

Mrs. Jonah Lisenby is visiting her parents Mr. and Mrs. Cue Sellers at Cuthbert, Ga., this week.

KEEN INTEREST IN BOWMAN MEETING

Keen interest is manifest by the residents of Birmingham, county and state on the eve of the address of P. G. Bowman at the Jefferson theatre on the subject, "Emmet O'Neal, Who He Is and What He Is." The address will be delivered beginning at 7:30 o'clock tomorrow night and M. W. Howard, former congressman from the eighth district, will preside.

On the stage during the address will be seated many friends of Mr. Bowman and indications are that the house will be packed from pit to dome and that many hundreds will be turned away. The address at the Jefferson theatre will be only one of a series of addresses that will be delivered throughout the state by Mr. Bowman on the same subject.

During the address tonight Mr. Bowman will make [illegible] so he states, and he declares he will [illegible]

Mr. Bowman declares that letters have been coming to his [illegible] asking information as to whether the speech would be made and he today took the opportunity to reiterate that he would certainly address the people Tuesday night. Mr. Bowman further declared that the address was only the beginning of a series of addresses he will deliver throughout the state on the same subject.

It is intimated that Mr. Bowman will review facts connected with recent campaigns including that campaign which resulted in placing Emmet O'Neal in the governor's chair of Alabama. What is regarded as a significant statement made today by Mr Bowman was to the effect that he would make no charges he could not prove.

The address will be one of the features of a stirring period in Alabama politics, and comes as a climax to a road breech between Governor O'Neal and Mr. Bowman who have been so closely affiliated for so long a time.

Whether a slush fund was sent to Alabama by the liquor interests and used in the recent campaigns will be a subject treated by Mr. Bowman in his address, so it is believed.

HE CHARGES THEY HAVE COST THE SOUTH 105 MILLION DOLLARS.

Washington, Nov. 13.—Responding to a request by Representative Aiken, of South Carolina that the Federal government undertake the prosecution of "bears" who, it is alleged, are engaged in depressing the price of cotton to the financial detriment of the southern producer, Attorney General Wickersham frankly admitted he did not understand the workings of a "bear pool" or how such a combination could operate in restraint of trade and commerce.

In correspondence made public today, it is stated [illegible] Attorney General [illegible] evidence of the existence of any such pool and requests Mr. Aiken to furnish this information.

The government's [illegible] Wickersham indicated, will be governed largely by the decision of the supreme court in the pending [illegible] against alleged "bulls" charged with cornering cotton to increase its price.

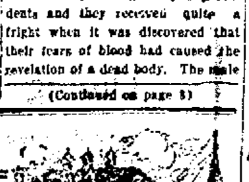

"If the court shall decide the essential question involved," he says, "and not let the case go off on a technical matter of pleading, we may have some light which will be of aid in the enforcement of the law against other combinations of a like character."

Mr. Aiken declares that if the government had the legal right to proceed against a combination of speculators whose purpose was to force up the price of cotton, it has the same legal right to prosecute a combination seeking to depress the price of the same commodity.

Rob South of Millions

"It is certain," he added, "that 'bear' pressure on Wall street has forced a decline of fully 3 cents per pound in the future market, thereby robbing the South of approximately $105,000,000, and giving it to the foreign spinners. This decline has been brought about by the bear element overselling the market, publishing false and misleading statements and combining to keep buyers out of the market."

Attorney General Wickersham agrees with Mr. Aiken in the general proposition that if cornering a product to increase its price is illegal, similar cornering to decrease its prices is similarly illegal.

Brothers, Separated 37 Years, Together by Handbill—One Away From Home.

Chicago.—Persistent questioning of a 7-year-old grandson about a picture in a circular will lead to the reunion of H J Rhodes, a naval veteran, whose home is in Elgin, and his brother, David B Rhodes, chief of police of Baker City, Oregon. The brothers had been lost to each other 37 years.

The brother in Elgin ran away from the family home at ..., Wis., at the age of 16 and joined the navy at 17 serving through the war. His brother enlisted and fought in the army during the same period. The brothers were in communication during the war, but afterward drifted apart and for a generation have been unable to find one another.

Several years ago H J Rhodes retired from business and made his home with his daughter, Mrs. R. Wahl in Elgin. A short time ago an illustrated booklet advertising Baker City came to the home and fell into the hands of Harry Wahl the little grandson of the veteran.

"Oh look!" he exclaimed as he turned the pages "here's the picture of a man with a name like grandpa's all dressed up like a policeman."

"Yes," ... "there are lots of men with the same name."

"Well I don't grandpa have brothers or anything?" persisted the boy. "Anyway this man looks like grandpa."

"David" spelled the boy. "I'm going to call him Uncle David. See grandpa here's Uncle David."

The old man studied the picture and then wrote to the man in Baker City. The relationship was established and Mr Rhodes will start for Baker City to visit his brother in a few days.

One View of Mountain Climbers.

Mountain climbing now a popular part of an outing at home and abroad was regarded in a far different light in its earlier days. This quotation will console many timid souls.—Argonaut.

Fore Feet of a Horse.

"It's a funny thing," said the old animal trainer, "but you can't train a horse to walk on his fore feet because he ain't built that way. Take the dog or cat animals and they'll not only walk on their fore feet, but they will go up and down stairs with their hind legs in the air. It's a little harder to teach than walking on the hind feet, but it is merely a matter of patience and of knowing how, but get a horse off his hind legs and you have a lame horse. Dozens of trainers have spoiled from one to twenty horses apiece trying for the trick, but the nearest any one ever came to it was an English trainer who had a jackass that could stay up for a little while, but even the buck was strained and soon had to be destroyed. Horses taken into upstairs theaters will go up the steps as agile as cats, but when they come down they have to be backed down. That's one reason why horses used in hill work break down so quickly. It's not the long, hard pull uphill; it's the holding back going down."—New York Sun

We gazed at the famous picture of "The Doctor" in silence that could be felt, and I tell you it fairly made me hold my breath and a lump come in my throat as I looked first at the suffering child and then at the kind doctor, with his grave face, and then at the father and mother in the background, and, as for Smart, I don't mind telling you I saw the water in his eyes, and presently a great big tear rolled down his cheek as he said:

"Isn't that wonderful? I suppose as a tailor I should be looking at the style of the M. D.'s clothes; but, man, I'm human, and when there is a picture that appeals like that to the great heart of humanity, why, I just forget all about my trade and think only of my humanity. Come on," he added. "I can't stay longer to look at that, for it reminds me too much of a little one I lost. Here you are," he said; "here's something more in our line. Dr. Johnson waiting for an audience with Lord Chesterfield. Here's comedy, if you like. And now we may examine the clothes."—London Tailor and Cutter.

The Garden of Eden.

In some of his lectures Professor Robert W. Rogers of Drew Theological seminary expressed his opinion on the location of the garden of Eden. He thinks that the garden of Eden was somewhere in the region lying between the rivers Tigris and Euphrates. In an address before the Harlem branch of the Y. M. C. A. some years ago he said:

"When the search for the holy grail ceased in the middle ages the human mind took up the problem of the location of the garden of Eden. This has been put in many places—Armenia, Ethiopia, Abyssinia, ... and equatorial Africa. ... Columbus ... and because there is an Adam's peak on the island of Ceylon others have put the garden there. It has also been found in Palestine and at the north pole."

AUTOMOBILE TAXES WILL HAVE TO BE PAID STATE.

Montgomery, Ala., Nov. 14.—General orders will go out to arresting officers over the State this week from the office of Secretary of State calling upon them to see that the State law requiring the registration and numbering of automobiles is adhered to. Already arrests have been made in Mobile, according to Max Porterfield, clerk in the registration department, who has just returned from a trip to that city with about $2,000 in delinquent fees.

"People have had long enough now to get familiar with the law and pay the required tax," said Mr. Porterfield, "and I think the department cannot afford to practice leniency any farther. I should say for Mobile, however, that motor car owners in that town, have been prompt in making settlement."

It was suggested at the Capitol Monday that Montgomery automobile owners have not been as prompt as they should have been in meeting the requirement, and it may be that some of these called before the courts before the end of the week.

The Real People

Elizabeth had never noticed how plain and provincial her family were until young Haddon began calling on her.

The contrast between his polished courtesy and her father's bluff good nature was positively painful, and she began to wish that her father had a club to go to evenings and that her mother wouldn't always come into the parlor and discuss the weather with Mr. Haddon. As for her boisterous brother Jack, she could almost find it in her heart to regret that he was not many miles away.

"Mother," she said, one evening when she had reason to expect young Haddon, "won't you please make Jack go to bed early tonight?"

"Make Jack go to bed early? Why, Bess, I don't tell Jack when to go to bed any more. He's too old for that."

"He isn't too old to drink lemonade and eat cookies as if he had never seen evening refreshments before," complained Elizabeth. "He acted like a pig and a wild Indian the other night. He stamped around and whistled so loud that we couldn't hear ourselves talk, and he used the commonest slang, mother. I don't know what Mr. Haddon thinks of him."

"Oh, I guess he knows a rollicking boy when he sees one," said Mrs. Day, comfortably.

"Mother," Elizabeth hesitated a moment. "I wish you wouldn't wear your apron when you come into the parlor evenings."

"Why not, Bess?"

"Well, it looks so—bourgeois."

"What's that?"

"Why, you know, sort of common."

"Well, that's funny. I always feel real dressed up when I have on one of my pretty aprons. But I won't wear an apron if you don't want me to."

"That's a dear," said Elizabeth, gratefully. "And, mother, do you think you could coax father to wear his coat when Mr. Haddon is here? It looks just dreadful for a man to go around the house with his coat off."

"But your father likes to be comfortable, and I don't think he looks a bit untidy without his coat."

Elizabeth sighed deeply. Just then the door bell rang. Eager to get there before her brother, she ran and opened the door herself.

"Say, you're getting awfully anxious, aren't you, Bess?" Jack called.

Elizabeth, in her endeavor to appear unconscious of this thrust, greeted her visitor with what she knew was stilted politeness. They had not been settled in the parlor two minutes before her mother appeared. She spoke pleasantly to young Haddon, asked him if he didn't think the evenings were getting cool, and then, glancing down at her apron, precipitately left the room. A moment later she returned, consciously smoothing out the front of her skirt, from which she had just removed her apron.

Elizabeth's annoyance at this was not lessened when Jack bobbed in and asked loudly: "What time you going to have the handout, Bess? I'm going down to Bud Brown's, but if there's to be a feed here I'll beat it back."

"Oh, Jack, I wish you'd—" began Elizabeth.

"Run on, dear," said Jack's mother. "I'll save you something if we have anything to eat. Oh, there's father." Mrs. Day's face beamed with welcome for an instant, and then suddenly clouded over. "Father, don't you think you ought to have on your coat? It's a little chilly."

"Chilly! Gammon, mother. You know I never wear my coat in the house. Say, Haddon, these women are always fussing at their men folks. Some day you'll know what it is to have a wife worrying about you."

Elizabeth's face turned scarlet, but Haddon laughed, and said: "I certainly hope so."

"Now, father, come out in the dining room. I want to show you something. Mrs. Day smiled at her own tact and led her husband away to be gently lectured on the subject of wearing a coat.

"Do you know," said Haddon to Elizabeth as soon as they were alone, "I think you are about the most fortunate girl in the world?"

"Why?" was the astonished query.

"Because you're surrounded by such whole souled relatives. I feel like embracing your sweet little mother when I see her wearing that crisp white apron. It takes me back to the time I had a mother up in Maine who wore white aprons. And your father! How hearty and kind he is! I tell you, in these days of affectation it's a privilege to meet people like Mr. and Mrs. Day."

"What about Jack?" asked Elizabeth, hesitatingly.

"He's an all round boy—the kind that makes the real man. It's the real people who count."

"I fear," murmured Elizabeth, "that I'm the only one in the family that isn't quite real."

Haddon laughed. "You're real enough to suit me," he answered.

"So your marriage has proved a disappointment to you, has it?"

"Yes, all except my husband's Christian name. I was always in love with the name Raoul."—Pilgrim's Pilgrim.

LOCAL OPTION ELECTION IN PIKE DEC. 21

Troy, Ala., Nov. 13.—The local option election in Pike occurs on Thursday, the 21st day of December, just four days before Christmas.

Probate Judge A. C. Edmondson, after having reviewed the petition and ascertained that there was a sufficient number of qualified signers, ordered the election on that date.

There are many predictions in regard to the election, some declaring that the county will remain dry, while others declare it will go wet. Some of those who think the county will go wet believe that a dispensary will be voted for Troy, while others think that saloons will prevail and that there may be several in Troy and one each in Banks, Brundidge and Goshen.

The assertion has been made that the blind tiger interests may vote the dry ticket and help carry the county against saloons, but the prohibition forces do not want success by any aid of the blind tiger people, but want success despite of them.

GINNING REPORT BEING WATCHED

New Orleans, Nov. 13.—The cotton market will again be concerned with figures on ginning this week, as the present period in the census bureau schedule of reports ends Monday night. It will not be long before private bureau estimates of the amounts ginned will be coming out, and they will probably have considerable influence on the course of the market.

The census report will be issued a week from Monday.

Time is now fast approaching when picking and ginning must fall off. In some sections the crop has been almost entirely gathered, and in not a few sections much more than 50 per cent has been gathered. Ginning, it is claimed, is not very far behind the picking, and a decided falling off in the outturn of the ginneries may come at any time. If there is a hint of this during this week the market ought to be better.

Trouble in China will be closely watched because the cotton mills of the world are losing a great deal of business on account of it. Prominent mill and spot firms claim that cancellation of orders for cloths by China have not yet been very large, but of course, it is admitted by everyone that very little fresh business can be done with the country in the state it is in.

Large crop estimates by private individuals and firms are expected again this week, and they will have more or less weight all the time. Circulars by the leading brokers on the week-end figures predict a market of moderate fluctations, and seem to be about equally divided in opinion as to which way prices will move.

Bowman Wants Some Firing Done Himself

Calls on the People to Stand Up, If They Want to Put Up Mouey Calling an Extra Session of the Legislature to Impeach Gov. O'Neal, and They Stood Up.

Thousand Turned Away From Jefferson Theatre

Governor's Public and Private Life Attacked By The Ex-Colonel.

Birmingham, Ala., Nov. 14.—Colonel Peyton G. Bowman, recently discharged from the office of the tax commission of Jefferson county by Governor O'Neal and from the governor's military staff, tonight before an audience which packed the Jefferson theatre, made an arraignment of the Governor of Alabama. Fully a thousand persons were turned away who were unable to get into the place.

Colonel Bowman took as his subject, "Emmet O'Neal, Who He is and What He is."

He denounced the governor's private and public life and conduct. He challenged Governor O'Neal to call the state legislature together so that he (Bowman) could institute impeachment proceedings.

In the midst of the presentation, the speaker, who showed that he felt humiliated at the action of the governor in removing him from office, asked that all who would contribute towards a fund to pay for the assembling of the legislature which would hear charges looking to the impeachment of the governor stand up and more than one thousand men stood. The speaker used such words as "consummate ingrate," and unworthy of his high office, and charged that the chief executive was guilty of matters and things that disentitled him longer to hold the office to which he was elected by an unsuspecting people. The speaker reviewed the charges that had been made against him both as an advisor of the governor and as tax commissioner, and at intervals insinuated that the governor was intemperate in his habits.

His closing sentences were: "I challenge you, Emmet O'Neal, as the governor of the State of Alabama, to assemble the legislature at the capitol in Montgomery at a time best suited for your mutual convenience that I may properly prepare and present to the house of representatives for its consideration, articles of impeachment against Emmet O'Neal as governor of this state and to the end that I may charge, first, the use of intoxicating liquors; second, willful neglect of duty; third, that you have been guilty of various and sundry corrupt practices, and fourth, that by your intemperate habits, your neglect of duty and corrupt practices, you have disgraced the high office to which you were elected, and you should be impeached and removed from office."

That there were many prohibitionists in the audience was apparent, for when the scathing denunciations were the most effective, the cheering was noticeable.

His first severe arraignment was of Dr. E. T. Fields whom he said could have been given gallons of ink and thousands of pens, and he could not have written a reply like the one that purported to have come from him in answer to the governor's request for the investigations. The speaker spoke of the legal advisor of the governor as the "architect gentleman," and committed on Attorney General Brickell's appearance, who he said went into the office thin, but is now fat and well groomed as a consequence of lounging with the governor. The review of the investigation into the Alamo stock took up some time and the speaker told of the governor's statement to the effect afterwards that there was nothing to the charges. Mr. Bowman said that at the same time the Governor had stated that he was glad the investigation had been made and that the accused had been exonerated.

"He stated to me that in the future if at any time any one should speak in any way detrimental or derogatory of me he would certainly send for me to hear my version. At the very time he made this promise to me he knew that a Louisville and Nashville train was transporting into the city of Birmingham one H. Y. Brooke, a man tried, convicted and sentenced by an Alabama court to a term of imprisonment for libel, and Emmet O'Neal knew at the time he made the above false statements to me that Brooke, who is one of Emmet O'Neal's public examiners, had and held in his possession a lot of typewritten questions prepared by Emmet O'Neal and directed to A. A. Gambill, the assistant in the office of Tax Commissioner of Jefferson County, the office which I then held, questions which Emmet O'Neal thought would elicit answers from Mr. Gambill that might possibly convict both me and him of violation of a criminal statute of this State."

Mr. Bowman told of his visits to Montgomery in the interest of his friends for appointment on the Ex. cise Commission. He said also:

"I say, it is patent even to the wayfaring man, even though he be a fool, that my removal from office was not in any way superinduced by any connection I may have had with the sale of Alamo Gas and Oil Company's stock. The Governor's concurrence in the findings of the Attorney General and his legal advisor in this regards is the merest subterfuge. It is the falsest of false pretenses and is only worthy of a cowardly falsifier."

Tells of Gambill's Appointment.

Bowman told of his appointment of Gambill as Assistant Tax Commissioner and said: "I deny that I have ever sold the office of Tax Commissioner to A. A. Gambill or that I have ever sold him a deputation thereof and I assert that for his services I am paying him out of my own pocket with my own money."

He explained the Vann matter, the appointment of the physician for convicts at Flat Top.

"The Governor was not seeking for the truth of his transaction," he said, "but was hunting for any excuse to carry out his compact with my enemies to remove me from office and as conclusive proof thereof I charge that Emmett O'Neal is corrupt in this, that just prior to my removal from office he promised Dr. Fields that neither he nor Dr. Vann would be disturbed in office, and that the Governor was after Bowman.

"Who is Emmett O'Neal? What is he? The most consummate ingrate of the century, a man who returns favors with treachery. Take his treatment of the Jews of Alabama outside of the city of Selma. Perhaps

LETTER OF DISMISSAL TO SEN. MOULTHROP

GOVERNOR O'NEAL LETS HIM GO TO PREVENT ANY EMBARRASSMENT

Birmingham, Ala., Nov. 14.—Publicity was given here today of the letter written by Governor O'Neal to Senator Robert L. Moulthrop, of this city, relieving the latter from further duties on the chief executive's military staff. The action taken by the governor is almost without a precedent in Alabama, and was due to the report which reached the governor that Senator Moulthrop felt aggrieved against the governor because of the removal of P. G. Bowman from the office of tax commissioner of Jefferson county.

Governor O'Neal's letter to Mr. Moulthrop is courteous in tone, and declares that the action is merely taken in order to save the Senator embarrassment. The letter is as follows:

Letter of Governor

Montgomery, Ala., Nov. 13, 1911.

Senator Robert L. Moulthrop,
Birmingham, Ala.

My Dear Senator:—

I know that some feeling has been engendered against me on account of my removal of Mr. P. G. Bowman as tax commissioner of Jefferson county. I know that you and Mr. Bowman have been friends for a great many years, and I have it, as a rumor, that you feel some grievance against me on account of my action in this matter, and that you have had under consideration the question as to whether or no, under the circumstances, you would remain on my staff.

I do not want to embarrass you on my account, and for this reason, and for this reason only, I write you this letter. To avoid any embarrassment, I relieve you from further duties on my staff.

Very Truly yours,
Emmet O'Neal,
Governor.

YEGGMEN LOOT SAFE IN MUNFORD STORE

Anniston, Ala., Nov. 14.—This morning at 1 o'clock the people of Munford were awakened by an explosion in the store of S. A. Stewart & Son, which is also occupied by the postoffice. The explosion was followed by a fire, which quickly destroyed the building, after which it was discovered that the safe used by Mr. Stewart for his business and also for the postoffice had been blown and looted.

Imediately after the fire telephone communication was established with Sheriff McAdory, of Birmingham. He arrived in Anniston at 8 o'clock with blood hounds, and went immediately to Munford to take up the trail of the yeggmen.

$44,000,000 FOR GOOD ROADS IN THE SOUTH

ACCORDING TO SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE WILSON ALA. BAMA GETS $3,184,00

Washington, Nov. 14.—Speaking of the appropriations of good roads and of what is being done in that direction, Secretary of Agriculture Wilson today declared that nearly $44,000,000 was expended during the present year for good roads in the Southern States alone. The secretary will speak on the subject at the good roads meeting next week at Richmond, Va.

"Through its bureau of good roads," the secretary continued, "the agricultural department has been stimulating the country for better highways, sending out experienced engineers to conduct demonstration work and a force of trained men to give illustrated lectures.

Reports to the department show that be $44,000,000 spent during the first ten months of the calendar year was divided as follows:

Alabama, $3,184,000; Arkansas, [illegible]; Delaware, $430,000; Florida, $1,505,000; Georgia, $2,[illegible]; Kentucky, $2,500,000; Louisiana, $1,114,404; Maryland, $[illegible]; Mississippi, $2,130,000; North Carolina, $4,505,800; Oklahoma, $1,505,000; South Carolina, $1,[illegible]; Tennessee, $2,000,000; Texas, $7,000,000; Virginia, $4,904,000; West Virginia, $125,000.

The department is co-operating with the state or local authorities in practically every state and representatives show that over 2,000 miles of roads were built during the past twelve months.

Record Few Years Ago

"A few years ago the department conducted an investigation to determine the condition of roads throughout the country. The result showed 2,951,750 miles of public highways of which 7.14 per cent were improved, while there were in the sixteen states of the south 695,151 miles, of which only 27,186 or 3.87 were improved.

Since 1904 the annual expenditures of money for road improvements in the nation has doubled and in the South it has more than doubled. The movement for good roads is going to benefit the farmer in getting his products to market quickly in all kinds of weather at a reduced cost; is going to increase the value of his lands and will give his children better school facilities.

How This to Farmers

"Good roads will particularly prove beneficial to the farmers of the south where, apart from the staple crops, the soil will produce almost every known crop and especially late winter and early spring varieties when transportation from farm to market is rendered difficult owing to the cut up and rough condition of unimproved roads.

For demonstrating purposes, the department recently laid over 1,000 square yards of object lesson roads of nearly every type of road and our road experts are constantly at their work in all parts of the country, while the laboratories are testing all kinds of possible road materials in order to secure the best improved materials for road construction."

Ozark Man Arrested For Embezzlement

INAUGURAL DATES MAY BE CHANGED

Washington, Nov. 14.—A determined effort to amend the constitution changing the date of the inauguration of the president from March 4 to the last Thursday in April and alternating the official term of the session of congress, is to be one of the features of the sixty-second congress, which assembles in regular session next month.

A joint resolution introduced last summer in the house of representatives by Congressman Henry, of Texas, and in the senate by Senator Clark of Wyoming, will be taken up by the house committee on judiciary soon after congress convenes. Besides changing the date of the inauguration the resolution provides for the elimination of the short session of congress, fixing the second Thursday of January as the date for the termination of senators and representatives. Representative Henry, author of the resolution, said today that the coming session is an auspicious one in which to make the change, because if the amendment passes, it could be voted on by the legislatures of all the states within two years and become a law before the presidential campaign of 1916.

NEGRO UNDER ARREST LAYS BLAME ON TEAGUE

Will King, the negro man, who after declaring that he had seen John Teague in company with Albert Martin, the negro man who was found dead under the school building yesterday at 2 o'clock in the morning on which he was killed, was arrested and placed in jail, places the blame of the fireman's death on Teague. He declares that the negroes had been gambling and that Martin had won $30 from Teague, and this added to his monthly salary of $50, making $80 in his possession, was no doubt stolen by the lower after he had seen them. King's arrest followed his statement to the officers.

When the dead man's pockets were searched yesterday by the coroner's jury to see if robbery had been the motive, his watch, a bunch of keys and a clipping from the Dothan Eagle were his only possessions, his money evidently having been stolen. Officers are now searching for Teague.

J. T. CRAWFORD CHARGED WITH $10,000 SHORTAGE OF BANK FUNDS

Ozark, Ala., Nov. 14.—J. T. Crawford, assistant cashier of the Dale County Bank of this city, was arrested here Monday afternoon on a warrant sworn out by State Bank Examiner E. C. Meredith, charging the embezzlement of approximately $10,000. It is alleged by the state banking department that Crawford passed his loans and discounts and made false entries on the books to cover up the shortage.

The accusation is the result of an examination made October 7 by Bank Examiners Meredith and Hosmer. They reported the alleged shortage to State superintendent of Banks A. E. Walker in an exhaustive report. Action at that time, however, was deferred, and the matter was kept quiet pending further investigations.

Examiner Meredith was in Ozark, Monday when the arrest was made and at once wired the banking department of the fact. The alleged irregularities, according to the banking department, have been in progress since 1909.

Mr. Crawford is connected with some of the most prominent families of Southeast Alabama and has ranked high socially in that section. He was arraigned immediately following his arrest, and, upon waiving examination, he was held to the grand jury in the sum of $1,000, which bond he readily furnished.

Alleged Shortage Made Good

The alleged shortage, it is given out, has been made good by the bank and the strength of the institution is in no way affected.

The state banking department, under the guidance of Superintendent Walker, has adopted a vigorous policy in reference to violators of the law. Banks are being examined now more rigidly than ever before under the state laws, and this is probably the first instance in years where this branch of the service has been instrumental in the arrest of a bank employe for alleged shortage.

Mr. Walker was placed in charge of the banking department when it was organized on a new basis as a separate and distince branch of the service by last winter's legislature.

If when an old man tries to tell his sons to transfer his knowledge of the world to some young man that young man would be a mighty wise one if he tried to pick up some information as he went along like the old one did. He in turn when he lives out the years allotted to him if he could hand the knowledge on to still another, it wouldn't be but a generation or two before we would have a race of men as wise as the serpents.

Probably you yourself think that you remember what old men told you. You do some of it. They are the things that are of special interest to you, stay by you. The other and the useful part goes in one ear and out the other. It never does you any good for it is something you have heard so often till it has no meaning. It leaves no impression. It isn't given you with an air of mystery and secrecy and it costs you nothing, and is therefore cast off as useless.

Advice is so common and so cheap till it is worth but little to our race. Every man has to buy it—on the dollar down and dollar a week for as many weeks as there are plan. He never gets through paying for the very thing that people have been trying to give him but he wouldn't take.

Think of the courts that would close for lack of cases if advice went for much. Lawyers would only do an office practice, drawing up a paper now and then but seldom if ever, appearing at the bar to plead a cause.

The doctors give enough free advice to cut their practice down over half, but they, like all the rest of us know the advice will not be taken. So they are kept busy helping people out of trouble they could so often avoid if they used some of the free advice poured out to them day after day.

We remember when a boy just reading advertisements of the fake mail order houses the glaring head line Free send no money caught our eye. We probably didn't finish the advertisement. We got the idea by sending 15 cents that a beautiful gold watch hunting case would be sent.

We hung around the postoffice like a negro you owe a quarter till the answer came, but it brought no watch. It gave a plan which if followed the watch might be earned.

Free things after that never appealed to us much. That's about the way everybody is. Anything that costs nothing is considered as good as nothing.

But most of us would be better off if we would stoop up some of the free advice as it ponds around us and keep it. It will come in as fuller later along.

JUST LOAFERS

A boy who plays out of school or out of work is a loafer. He may not be a charge upon society but he is going the way that makes tramps. He is not even making any preparations for the future that will be worth anything to him.

A boy may have parents who can afford to let him loaf. He should not be allowed this privilege [illegible]

His loafing [illegible]

For instance [illegible] in papers [illegible] wanted to keep him busy. He then of the job and asked him [illegible] let him quit. [illegible] of his who could go to [illegible] and get money whenever he wanted it, and he doesn't work.

The boy delivering papers tonight that something was wrong in the arrangements. He had to deliver papers to get spending money when another boy got all he wanted without it.

The loafing boy of today is the rascal or a weakling at best of tomorrow in the future of the fright [illegible]

[illegible]

There are boys in this town who ought to be in school. Tuition isn't out of their reach. If they don't care to go to school and are only occasionally they can find employment. They can learn something and learning of the sterner things of life.

The man who has boys should know with whom they are associating. If they are running with the loafing boys they should be kept in. A loafing boy learns too much. They get world wise before their time and come to know things that operate against them. Their force and energy has not been properly directed.

A boy is not lazy by nature. He wants action. He wants company and his judgment in choosing that company isn't always reliable. He needs something to keep his mind and body employed or he is growing crooked and developing in the wrong direction.

PROBABLE TAPEWORM INFECTION OF MICHIGAN WATERS

There is danger of the waters of Lake Michigan becoming infected with a large and particularly dangerous species of tapeworm. The State Board of Health of Michigan says that the attention of Dr War thin of the Department of Pathology of the University of Michigan has been specially called to the occurrence of a broad tapeworm in the mining population of northern Michigan. A large number of Finns and Swedes living in mining towns might be expected to include cases of this infection which is said to be very prevalent in Finland and Russia as well as other Baltic states. It also occurs in other European countries and in Japan but up to recent years has rarely reported in this country. Prior to 1888 but one case has been reported though undoubtedly others had occurred unrecognized and a large tapeworm was certainly not unknown in Alaska in the sixties among the Russian and half breed residents which by them was attributed to the eating of salmon. Up to 1907 only thirty cases had been reported in the United States. The danger lies in eating fish uncooked but there is a large market for smoked lake whitefish and herring which are probably often eaten with out cooking, or without cooking enough to destroy the parasites. The report to the Michigan Board of Health concludes with a statement of the belief that the infection of the northern waters has already occurred. It is recommended that measures be taken to prevent the further contamination of the waters and that warning be given against eating fish—unless thoroughly cooked—which has been caught in localities where the parasite has been found. Only thorough cooking will destroy the worm and prevent infection. Smoking salting and drying are insufficient. As the Journal of the American Medical Association says in concluding an editorial on this subject the matter is on which has more than a simple local interest as the Lake Superior fisheries furnish a large proportion of the choicest fresh water fish used in the northern states. A general infection of lake Superior fish could hardly be kept from spreading to other lakes and thus greatly increasing the evil.

A DEMOCRATIC YEAR

Republican hope in the election returns.

Massachusetts normally 30,000 Republican has gone Democratic on a squarely fought issue of the tariff [illegible] with a normal vote of [illegible] carried Democratic [illegible] New Jersey [illegible]

It was a Democratic year. No wonder President Taft was blue in Chicago and sardolc in Cincinnati where he swore his vote in as a lawyer and told the election board he might soon be practicing his profession.

WHY DIDN'T THAT LAST

Had you ever thought of what a short time the reversable overcoat stayed with us?

How long has it been since the sports wore a rattlesnake overcoat one side for every day and the other for Sunday?

You can remember them some of you and they were the envy of those who didn't have one. They seemed to stay with us only a season and then the style shifted almost as suddenly as if the order had come from Paris. We saw them worn by the darky on the place or hanging around waiting on opportunity to be loaned but they were not worn much.

Just why the style has not returned we don't know. They would sell just as easily as the extra long, ones of one season and the extra short ones of the next.

It might be said that Aviator C P Rodgers had a narrow escape. He made a successful flight across the United States, and when got within sight of the landing place his gasoline engine got out of fix, or a guy wire snapped or he lost control and he glided toward the ground too fast for safety. He was knocked unconscious, and may not recover. Just about the time he has made a record he was forced to make another record that of falling over a hundred feet without being suddenly killed.

It so often happens that a man's full worth is not appreciated till after he is dead. When David Graham Phillips died he left a trunk full of unpublished stories. They had probably been written in his earlier life before his reputation was established and returned to him by the publishers probably the same ones who are now glad to pay fabulous prices for the same stories.

It is a wonder to us that the sales of Peruna hasn't fallen off a slight. You notice the pictures of handsome women who were cured by this wonderful remedy all have their hair done up the old style. Some one should suggest to the Peruna people that if they will have some new photos made of well women that their sales will pick up again.

During the next few months you need not be surprised at the candidates who offer their services. They are slow about making their wishes known to the people but they are wise. No voting can be done for a spell yet the first of next year is plenty of time to let the people know about it.

A Boston woman from the country where we get our culture is advertising that she will not be responsible for debts made by her husband. Nearly all of the women in this nation could [illegible] kiss home and loved ones good by for a very indefinite time and their affairs will have to go till the trial is over if it ever is.

Whatever ailment mankind is heir to some men will have a remedy patented and put on the market guaranteed to cure it or money refunded if you follow the directions [illegible] of the two dozen bottles you take.

You often agree with people only for the idea that they will hush it you do it you are usually disappointed for [illegible] talk will keep going till [illegible] differ in them [illegible] will argue that a while.

[illegible] a New Jersey hunter kill [illegible] two men and wounded another [illegible] after mistaking them for deer. It has been suggested that he is a poor hunter, taking a potshot.

It is said that there is almost twice as much life insurance in force in this country now as there was ten years ago and goodness knows there ought to be.

There are people who take no medicine, and think nothing about it while others take medicine all the time, and think and talk of but little else.

The mercury drops very rapidly when it starts down, but it usually strikes something near the bottom to make it turn the other way just as fast.

There are few Pullitzers in the newspaper game. He got in just at the right kind. He might have got ten out in a good time.

You can say what you please about the cold weather we have but it doesn't stay with us long enough to get people used to it.

To grow old gracefully is quite a job by some people. They try to conceal this form of growth.

Along with other free advice we shouldn't overlook that received about eating.

A western scientist says that the world is wobbling. Probably it needs a waiter.

Canada has had her back up every since Champ Clark joked about her.

J Howard Moore, instructor of zoology at the Crane Technical high school, who spoke before the Young People's Socialist league the other night, placed the ban on the flip-flapping by declaring such an action was "violating a law of science and merely giving strength to tendencies operating against his proper evolution"

Translated into schoolboy English, Mr. Moore's tabooing of one of the time honored amusements of the schoolroom means that such an accomplishment points to traits in the possession of the wagger which usually belong to the donkey

"Man was once a wild animal and contended unarmed with other animals for food and life And so long as he was on an equal footing in the battle for life he had need of his ears But nowadays he has become such a chemical wonder that he blows out the lives of his enemies with explosives, and his ears have gone to ruin as a consequence"

Story of William McKinley When He Was Congressman.

How When in Lower House He Twice Confuted the Low Tariff Arguments of His Friend, Leopold Morse of Boston.

By E. J. EDWARDS.

The late Leopold Morse represented for some years one of the Boston (Mass.) districts in the lower house of congress. He was a colleague there of ex-Governor John D. Long, who afterward became secretary of the navy in McKinley's cabinet, and of Ambrose A. Ran..., one of the ablest lawyers who ever represented Massachusetts in the house of representatives. Mr. Morse was a business man. He was the proprietor of a very large ready-made clothing store, said to be the largest in New England. He was a short, thick-set man, with a sandy goatee, curly brown hair, a florid complexion and large blue eyes. He made no attempt to conceal his gratification over the fact that Boston should have sent him, a retail merchant, to congress, with such distinguished men as Long and Hanney.

Mr. Morse had not been a member of the lower house a month before Representative William McKinley of Ohio made friendly overtures for something for than a formal acquaintance. A quaint personality, a very skillful manner of adapting the business principles which apply well to retail trade to all the great financial operations of the government, and a charming openness and kindliness of manner all caused this Boston retail merchant unconsciously to concentrate upon himself much of the attention of Major McKinley. Democrat though he was, Mr. Morse and McKinley became very close friends, and the fact that Morse advocated a tariff for revenue only, while McKinley was the apostle of high protection at that time, seemed to intensify their personal friendship.

Yet, McKinley, who was more of a humorist than many persons suspected, used often to indulge in sly fun at Mr. Morse's expense, as, for instance, when, during a tariff debate Mr. Morse had complained that protection made it possible to buy clothes cheaper in England than in the United States, McKinley took from his desk a suit of clothes. He held them up to the view of the house. He asked Mr. Morse if these clothes were not as good as any that could be bought in England, and if the price of the clothes was not as low as would be charged for like articles in England. He then read the label upon the clothes, which showed that they had been purchased at the clothing house of Leopold Morse in Boston. Never was a tariff for revenue only debater more completely confounded; but Mr. Morse frankly admitted that McKinley had got the better of him.

A day or two later Mr. Morse made the statement on the floor of the house that he was certain that it was impossible for a man beginning with nothing and doing business with perfect honesty to make a fortune of $3,000,000 by the time he was 40 years of age. He went so far as to say that no fortune in excess of that amount, unless it was inherited, was earned honestly by any American.

An hour or two later McKinley beckoned Mr. Morse to his side and asked him:

"Did I understand you to say that no fortune in excess of $3,000,000 could be honestly accumulated by any man in the United States?"

"Yes, I said that; and I believe it," was the positive answer.

"Mr. Morse, you sell in your store goods, like shirts made of cotton?"

"Yes."

"You, of course, have heard of Amos and Abbott Lawrence and also of Samuel Slater and his sons, the originators of cotton manufacture in New England?"

"Yes, I have."

"You know, of course, that the Lawrence brothers ventured all their little capital in utilizing the water power of the Merrimac river—that they built cotton mills in what are now the cities of Lawell and Lawrence."

Mr. Morse began to be uneasy.

"Did you ever hear a word that reflected upon the business integrity or personal character of the Lawrences or of the Slaters?" continued McKinley. "Don't you know that these men, by their efforts, created the great manufacturing industries of New England and that each one died possessed of considerably more than $3,000,000?"

"Major," said Mr Morse frankly, "I hadn't thought of that. I guess I will have to limit what I said about fortune making to speculators. I don't believe a speculator ever honestly made $3,000,000."

And so greatly impressed was Leopold Morse with McKinley's argument and his kindly way of putting it that he then and there began to predict that the Republican party would nominate and elect William McKinley president—and that was ten years before William McKinley was nominated.

What Rhymes With Babe?

A common English word for which there is only one rhyme is "babe" and it was Swinburne who used it with exquisite appropriateness in "A Rhyme:"

Babe if rhyme be none
For that sweet small word
Babe the sweetest one
Ever heard

Right it is and meet
Rhyme should keep not true
Time with such a sweet
Thing as you

Love alone with yearning
Heart for astrolabe
Takes the sun's height burning
O'er the babe

"Silence" is another word beloved of poets that has no rhyme Mrs. Browning went to the very limits of her passion for assonance when she rhymed it with "islands"

Oddities About Alphabets.

When the Portuguese first explored Brazil they made great fun of the natives of that country because they had in their alphabet no f, l or r—a people the invaders declared without fe, ley or rei—without faith law or king The Mohawks again have no labials and vowed it was absurd when the missionaries tried to teach them to pronounce b and f for who said they can speak with his mouth shut.—Lindsay's Magazine

Something Was

Livers was smoking a cheap cigar "Seems to me," said Brooks "I smell something like cloth burning."

But Livers was game.

He touched the lighted end of his cigar to his shirt sleeve.

"No wonder" he said exhibiting the burned spot.—Chicago Tribune

Changed the Geography

"No you chump! Put it down as goulash a la Russe under the head of special dishes"—Jugend

Salvage Crew Successful in Raising Man-of-War.

Vessel Sunk in 1799 Carried Gold Treasure Estimated at $5,000,000—Two Quaint Old Cannons and Some Balls Recovered

Terschelling Holland—The search for $5,000,000 sunken treasure believed to be aboard the old British man-of-war Lutine which was wrecked in 1799 while on a voyage from Yarmouth to Hamburg gets closer and closer to success every day now

Bit by bit the old wreck has been uncovered The National Salvage association's ship Lyons great vacuum pump has now worked wonders in clearing away the masses of sand embedding her Now she is practically clear on the starboard side

The port side still remains more or less covered—the Lutine must have heeled over to port when she went down or else the water gradually urged her over that way—but the great pump should make little of the work of clearance

When this is done the exciting and romantic task of locating and bringing up the bullion which has so long lain on the sea bottom will begin Any day now, so the divers engaged on the wreck say the sand may be cleared and the first real haul of coins brought up

Already although no appreciable amount of the wealth borne on her last voyage by the old Lutine has yet been brought to the surface single coins many silver ones have been found Altogether roughly a handful of silver has been recovered

And coins are all that the wreck has yielded The Lutine's anchor a big crusted iron thing eighteen by eighteen feet with the ship's name engraved upon it is now on the lighter lying over the wreck and two quaint old cannons and some old fashioned cannon balls have also been found

The anchor which weighs about three tons is in a remarkable state of preservation as is another anchor brought up

One cannon was loaded almost to the muzzle The task of taking the charge out occupied a man practically a whole morning Everything about it is really wonderfully preserved even the cord and the flintlock apparatus is intact

The longer the weather remains fine the greater the chance of the gold being found soon In fine smooth weather the divers can work uninterruptedly but on stormy days all are forced to be idle

The gold is in bars and each is believed to be worth over $3,000

WED BY PROXY, VISITS WIFE

Railroad Employe Gets Leave of Absence to See Spouse for First Time in Fifteen Years

Los Angeles Cal—After walking 202,670 miles through snow sheds for the Southern Pacific company, battling with tramps and enduring all sorts of hardships Manuel K Silva a Portuguese decided he'd like to visit his wife

I've never seen her and we've been married about fifteen years now he told the officials in applying for leave of absence

His application was granted and he was placed on the pension list

Silva entered the employ of the Southern Pacific in 1879 as a watchman on the night shift in the snow sheds at the summit of the Sierra Nevada mountains For thirty-one years he walked eighteen miles a day making three round trips every night over a beat of three miles. And this aggregates 6,570 miles a year or 203,670 miles in thirty-one years more than eight times around the world

Fifteen years ago he married the sweetheart of his youth by proxy—under what is known as a contract marriage He the bridegroom was in America—the bride in Portugal—and on their wedding night he walked his solitary beat through the mountain darkness as usual

Frozen 14 Years in Ice

Pontresina Switzerland—Tourists while crossing the Tschierva glacier saw deep down in the clear ice the faces of two dead men Guides accompanying the party chipped out with their ice axes the frozen bodies of the two men and brought them to the surface

The bodies have not yet been identified but they probably are those of the two London tourists named Rembecke and Cole, who disappeared 14 years ago
